2021 Chairman's Award

In March of 2018, Florida Governor Rick Scott signed a law requesting the Joint Committee on the Library of Congress to approve the replacement of the statue of a Confederate general representing the State of Florida in the National Statuary Hall Collection with a statue of Daytona Beach's Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder of Bethune-Cookman University. Although that law officially codified the selection of Dr. Bethune as the first African American woman to represent a state in Statuary Hall, neither the state of Florida nor the federal government provided any funding for the project. That task fell to a group of local volunteers to plan, fundraise, and execute not only the creation of the marble statue, but also the transport and delivery of the 3-ton work of art from the sculptor Nilda Comas's studio in Pietrasanta, Italy to Daytona Beach and on to Washington, D.C.

Immediately following the signing, a group of volunteers formed a committee to effectuate the project. Led by community leader and philanthropist, Nancy Lohman, and local attorney, Robert W. Lloyd (General Counsel for Brown & Brown, Inc.), the committee soon morphed into the formation of the not-for-profit "Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune Statuary Fund, Inc." Over the ensuing years, and despite a global pandemic that impeded their progress, the Fund's Board of Directors initiated and completed the Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune Statuary Project.

The Project's initiatives included the funding, creation, and/or coordination of the following:

- Marble statue for the U.S. Capitol in Washington D.C.
- Bronze statue to be placed in the newly revitalized Daytona Beach Riverfront Esplanade
- Feature-length documentary
- K-12 curriculum module
- Month-long exhibition of the Dr. Bethune's marble statue in the lobby of the News-Journal Center, Daytona State College's facility on Beach Street in downtown Daytona Beach, which allowed all citizens of Daytona Beach to view the marble masterpiece that will adorn National Statuary Hall free of charge.
- In total, the Fund raised more than $800,000 to provide the total scope of the statuary project and invested countless hours in coordinating the logistics of the project's various facets.

The Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune Statuary Project is a proud achievement not just for the City of Daytona Beach, but also for the State of Florida and our nation.
