NATE GITTNER

YOUNG PROFESSIONAL OF THE YEAR

Nate Gittner serves as Director of Operations for Physician Services at Halifax Health, where he provides operational leadership across primary care, pediatrics, women's health, wound care, hyperbaric medicine, and other specialty services. Throughout his healthcare career, Nate has focused on expanding access to care, developing strong teams, and helping healthcare organizations better serve the communities that depend on them. His work has included opening new clinic locations, supporting physician recruitment, and leading initiatives designed to improve access, quality, and patient experience.

Nate's roots in Volusia County run deep. After graduating from high school locally and earning his associate degree from Daytona State College, he completed his bachelor's degree at the University of Central Florida and later earned an MBA from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. Although career opportunities initially took him elsewhere, Nate intentionally returned to Volusia County to build his career, raise a family, and contribute to the community that has long been home to him and his extended family. Today, he and his wife, Kate, are raising their two young sons in the community they love.

Beyond his professional responsibilities, Nate is passionate about leadership development and community engagement. Through organizations including Volusia Young Professionals, Leadership Daytona, and Daytona State College, he enjoys mentoring emerging leaders, sharing lessons learned throughout his own career journey, and helping others find meaningful ways to get involved in the community. Nate believes that investing in future leaders is essential to building a community where the next generation will choose to live, work, and raise their own families, and he remains committed to that effort.
